The House resumed the consideration of the Constitutional Suffrage Amendment.

SPEECH OF MS. ELDRIDGE.

Mr. ELDRIDGE (Wis.) said he was one of those who were opposed to this amendment to the Constitution. He believed this was not the time to effect such a radical purpose; and further, there were other States than those now represented on this floor who were entitled to be heard. He then referred to the hitberto declared objects for which the war was prosecuted. It was to greserve the Union with all its dignity and rights unimpaired, with a due regard to those belonging to the several States. It was intended as the war platform of the country, on which the mis-called Union party gathered its present power and strength. He maintained heat these promises ought to be fulfilled. There should he no unfalthfulness, perfudy or disregard of the principles onunciated; but gentlemen should hasten to make grood their plighted faith. On the ground of good faith, be demanded the union of all the States as opposed to the theory of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Ricevens) and others. He insisted that the insurgent States were not destroyed, and those who sought to overthrow the Government have incurred the penalty due to their conduct, but not the vongeance of infuriated passion. The late rebellious States are to be held in the grasp of wespotio power in order that the ascendency of the Republican party may be secured.

Mr. Strouse expressed his surprise at the extraordinary manner that the bill and resolutions to amend the Constitution are pressed on the consideration of the House. Such propositions to amend the expanic law are brought in as if this was a State Logislative, and the Constitution are alread company, asking an amendment to the charter to build a sincing or a turnout.

It would not be sount of the numerous patches. It would not be specified by the people. This amendment was intended to effect the South as aliens, foreigners and conquered territory, under the law of nations. If this be true, where was the necessity for the amendment? But whose States were not out of the Union, and the Northern States do not desire such a change in the organic law. Those who have been elected under the forms of the in the South should be admitted here to participate in the proceedings so vitally affecting their interests. Boston, Thursday, Jan. 25, 1865.

The thirty-fifth annual meeting of the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society was held to-day, Edmund Quincy, the President, in the Chair. Among the resolutions offered was one to dissolve the Society, which gare rise to a long discussion, in which Wm. Lloyd Garrison presented an exposition of his views. He said the nation had decreed by its organic law the utter extinction of Slavery. The public sentiment was connected with and confirmed in its devotion to freedom, and the foot of war had added its orashing tread to the extinction of Slavery. The word "arti-Slavery" was no longer distinctive. To-day the country was anti-Slavery. The cld reproach was taken away. The uncompromising demand for freedom to the oppressed was no longer needed. The men and women of this Society were "fanatics," incendiaries "or "infidels" no longer. They had not gone down to the millions, but the millions had come up to them. Henceforth the members of the Society were to enter on a newwork—not anti-Slavery work, but the work of securing the education, the elevation, the political rights of property, and franchise to the negro man, and in this we would be supported by, and act with, the masses of the American people.

Kingst., North River, where she was visited during the day by a large number of persons. This vessel is a valuable addition to the New-York Mail Company's Star Line of steamships, and is under command of a veteran seaman and a courteous gentieman, Capt. Horatio Nelson. For symmetrical finish and interior artistic decorations the Rising Star is unsurpassed, while for starch construction and immense capacity she is pronounced to be unrivated by any vessel afloat: She has been fitted up regardless of expense, and with all the elegance that art could suggest.
The appointments of the saloons, and the arrangements for the passengers are excellent and will sait the most the owners nearly or quite $1,000,000. The engines, which were designed by Krastus Smith, esq., were built by Joha Roach of the Etna Iron Works, and cost $200,000. Her cylinder is 100 inches in diameter, with 12 foot slide of piston. The vessel was built by Joyce Waterbury, and she is 2,800 tuns measurement. In length, she is 315 feet, in breadth of beam 44 teet, and in depth of hold 31 feet 6 inches. She has three decks, and is so skillfu'lly framed that no vessel of her tunnage has such capacity for cargo. Her rate of speed will be tried in a few days.
